

EDN* goes global and becomes *IDN

Anne-Marie Felton and Kristin de Backer

We are very pleased to announce a new era for the FEND Journal. You will undoubtedly notice a change in the title to International Diabetes Nursing. This coincides with a change in publishers to Maney Publishing.

We are very excited with this new development, recognizing the global nature of the diabetes epidemic. It will broaden the reach to an international scope and will encourage global contributions by nurse researchers, clinicians and leaders in the global field of diabetes nursing. The sharing of experiences and research findings from across the world will enrich the content and relevance of IDN. We are most grateful to Maney Publishing for their enthusiasm and professional support in establishing this new development.

Prof. Angus Forbes and Dr Magdalena Annersten-Gershater continue as co-editors and will lead the members of the editorial board. It is anticipated that additional members will be added to the editorial board to reflect the global reach of the journal.

We thank Prof. Forbes and Dr Annersten-Gershater for their commitment and encourage you to submit your articles for consideration. We also wish to thank Lucy McIvor of Maney Publishing for her commitment during this change over period.